A Weather Change Across the Plains

Weather across Western Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle has been anything but ordinary this fall. After weeks of unusually warm temperatures and dry conditions, several rounds of rain have brought much-needed relief to parts of the Southern Plains. As November begins, changing weather patterns are bringing cooler air and a chance for additional moisture.

September was especially hot and dry across the region. According to the National Integrated Drought Information System, drought conditions expanded during the month, leaving much of the Southern Plains dealing with moisture shortages. By the end of September, 84% of the region was experiencing drought.

October brought a welcome change in some areas. A powerful storm system moved across Oklahoma and Texas October 13-15, dropping 3 to 5 inches of rain across portions of the southeastern Texas Panhandle. Some locations west of Oklahoma City received 6 to 8 inches. The rainfall improved soil moisture and ˆ and helped reduce drought conditions, although localized flooding also occurred.

While the rain was beneficial, it did not erase the moisture deficits left behind by the dry summer. Conditions still vary considerably from one location to another, and additional rainfall will be important as the region moves into winter.

Storms also moved across the Oklahoma and Texas Panhandles early this week, with the National Weather Service warning of possible severe weather in parts of Oklahoma on Monday. A cold front and changing winds are following the storms, while above-normal temperatures are expected to continue through much of the week.

For area farmers and cattlemen, the weather makes a big difference this time of year. Wheat needs adequate moisture to establish good growth, while pastures need time and rainfall to recover before winter. Better grazing conditions could help cattle producers reduce supplemental feed needs, but hay and other feed supplies will remain important where grass is short.

There is some encouraging news looking ahead. The Climate Prediction Center's November-through-January outlook favors above-normal precipitation across much of the Southern Plains. While seasonal forecasts are not guarantees, additional moisture could help improve pastures, support winter wheat and gradually reduce lingering drought conditions.

After a difficult stretch of heat and dry weather, area producers will be hoping the wetter pattern continues. Another few good rains could make a meaningful difference for both crops and livestock as winter approaches.

Elk City Commissioners Approve Change Order for New Animal Shelter

October 29, 2026 - Elk City, OK – Elk City commissioners approved an $8,025 change order for the city's new animal shelter during their latest meeting, as construction continues on the long-awaited facility.

The change order, awarded to Nebhut Construction, is part of the ongoing project to relocate the city's animal shelter from its current location on South Main Street to a building directly south of the Elk City airport. The new facility occupies the site of a former juvenile center.

Elk City Mayor Micah Kilhoffer acknowledged frustration over the project's lengthy construction timeline but said progress is being made.

"It's been a long, slow process," Kilhoffer said. "I think our questions and comments were probably presented with some frustration. You know, why is this taking so long?"

Kilhoffer said delays appear to be related to the availability of equipment, materials and workers needed to complete the project.

"I think a lot of it just has to do with the resources, getting the equipment here, and just getting the folks to show up and do the work," Kilhoffer said.

Despite the setbacks, the mayor said the latest construction update indicates the project is moving closer to completion.

"We're in the middle of plumbing and electric and should start seeing some of that stuff get buttoned up, and then we can go in and do the finish work," Kilhoffer said.

Once completed, the new facility is expected to replace the existing animal shelter on South Main Street.

No specific completion date was announced during the discussion.

Deputies Help Remove Marijuana Plants From Former Grow Site Near Elk City

November 2, 2026 - Beckham County, OK – Beckham County deputies and a county crew helped U.S. Marshals remove dried marijuana plants from a grow operation outside Elk City that federal authorities raided several years ago, Sheriff Derek Manning said.

Manning said a U.S. Marshal contacted him seeking guidance on disposing of plants left at the property. According to Manning, the property was going through a federal disposal process following the earlier raid.

The sheriff's office had assisted the federal agency during that raid. Manning said his department more commonly assists the Oklahoma Bureau of Narcotics with similar operations.

After discussing the removal with the marshal, Manning offered his department's help. Deputies met federal personnel at the property, and Tate Fennell sent a county crew to help load and haul away the plants.

Manning said the plants had been sitting for at least a couple of years and were completely dried out. Moving them released heavy dust inside the buildings.

"Just bumping one released all kinds of dust in there," Manning said.

When Manning arrived about 10 to 15 minutes after work began, he found deputies coughing heavily. He stopped the work and directed everyone to leave the buildings while he obtained masks.

"We didn't know what all we were being exposed to," Manning said.

The crew resumed work after putting on masks, which Manning said helped. He spent about two hours at the site, and deputies continued working for another hour to an hour and a half.

A county crew used a skid steer equipped with a claw attachment to load the plants into trucks for removal.

Manning said he did not know what would happen next with the property, but the marijuana removal had been completed. He praised the cooperation among those involved.

"The U.S. Marshals are very, very courteous and professional to work with," Manning said.

Body of Missing Kayaker Recovered at Tom Steed Lake

October 30, 2026 - Kiowa County, OK – The Oklahoma Highway Patrol has confirmed the recovery of the body of 34-year-old India J. Norman of Roosevelt, who went missing following a kayaking accident at Tom Steed Lake.

According to OHP, Norman's body was recovered Thursday afternoon, October 29, near the Cold Spring area of the lake by Troop W Marine Enforcement troopers. The discovery followed a multi-day search involving several agencies.

The incident occurred shortly after midnight on Saturday, October 24, approximately 1.4 miles west of the park side boat ramp and three-quarters of a mile north of the southern shoreline in Kiowa County.

According to the Highway Patrol's report, Norman was operating a Lifetime Pacer kayak westbound on the reservoir when a wave struck the left side of the vessel, throwing her into the water. Norman reportedly held onto the kayak for an undetermined amount of time before going underwater. She did not resurface.

Authorities said Norman had been kayaking with a friend in a separate kayak when both vessels capsized. Her friend was rescued the following morning, but Norman remained missing.

The Highway Patrol reported that no personal flotation devices were present or in use at the time of the incident.

Conditions at the time included clear skies, an outside temperature of 61 degrees and a water temperature of 66 degrees. The water depth at the reported accident location was approximately 11 feet.

OHP confirmed that Norman's family has been notified of the recovery.

Outlook

Adam loved junk food and hated getting off the couch. Ate pizza and burgers and fries every chance he got. Chased it with Dr. Pepper and cookies and brownies and ice cream. Adam's only goal was to sit still and satisfy his belly.

So his belly got huge. Then his health got bad. Looked and felt terrible. His limited outlook got him into trouble.

Bill liked junk food, but what he wanted even more was to look and feel good and have good health. So he decided to eat well, exercise regularly, and cut out unhealthy food. Early on, the exercise made him sore, and he missed the snacks he used to enjoy several days a week. But he kept going, and eventually he looked and felt better. The longer he lived this way, the better he looked and felt, and the better his health got.

Bill's broader outlook and ultimate goals led him to make decisions that weren't a lot of fun early on, but after a while they brought great rewards.

Cliff wanted to make a lot of money quickly. So he emptied his savings account and took $10,000 to Las Vegas for a weekend of fun and profit. Three days later, he returned home with just $900 of his savings intact. His short-term outlook left him wishing he'd done something else.

Darrel wanted to make a lot of money, but he spoke to an investment advisor and then put $10,000 from his savings into an index fund. Even though money got tight, Darrel contributed a little of his paycheck to that fund every month.

Growth was slow at first. Barely noticeable, in fact. But he kept at it, contributing to his fund every single month, without fail. The gains got larger and his fund began growing by bigger amounts. He was well on his way to something exciting for the future.

Edward owned a business and wanted to grow his sales immediately. For one month he ran ads enthusiastically telling everyone what he sold and how hard he worked to make customers happy. Sales didn't increase.

So Edward decided to try it for another month. He ran another ad that cranked up the enthusiasm, listed even more products than before, and guaranteed that his service simply could not be beat. Sales didn't increase, so Edward decided that advertising didn't work.

Frank owned a business and wanted to grow his company until he retired. Week after week that first year, he ran ads that revealed things about himself and his company. He showed who he was and what his company stood for. Sales didn't grow at first, but at the end of 3 months, he noticed new faces in the store and increased traffic on his website. As he finished his first year, sales had risen nicely.

Frank kept going every week with his messages about real life situations and how lives were being made better by what the company offered. More and more people were bonding with Frank and his company. More and more people were visiting his website and his store. By the end of the second year, sales had grown significantly.

Our outlook and what we want to accomplish determine the approach we take to life. Short-term thinking leads to short-term actions that often produce bad long-term results. What do you want to accomplish, and what will you do to get there?
